LIVE STOCK OF THE DOMINION.

Newspaper readers have often heard lately of the unsatisfactory state of the live stock industry of Canada, principally by the evidence given at different committees appointed at various times to enquire into matters. We have heard of numbers of men going out of the live stock business altogether, others ceasing to breed cattle, more who have ceased to keep any dogs. We have, however, never had this deplorable state of things brought more forcibly to notice than by the news published in Tuesday's Bulletin, showing that the Dominion in the live stock of the Dominion from the figures of a year ago.

It is appalling to think that this country, which prides itself upon being an ideal stock country, should show such a remarkable decrease in all most animals.

It is useless to attempt to mitigate the evil by pointing to a shortage also in the States. The causes for any decrease in that country are easily identifiable and in no way concern us at the moment.

What is the reason for the deplorable state of things with us? The cause has been known for years to be the same, and has taken an intelligent interest in these matters. It is simply and solely the lack of a steady and remunerative market for our stock. The commission after commission has been appointed to enquire into matters and render a remedy, but until we had the report of the committee on the matter nothing of a practical nature was suggested that seemed likely to put an end to this unsatisfactory state of things.

We have in Great Britain the finest market in the world for all kinds of first class quality of food stuffs, goods which this country supplies in abundance. As far as our cattle are concerned, we have neglected to take advantage of it, other than by sending a few head yearly on the hoof, a method which is admitted by everyone to be crude and antiquated, and has consequently in every country but our own, been largely supplanted by the more scientific and up-to-date method of sending the animal dead, thus shipping up all sorts of subsidiary industries in the exporting country on the by-products.

Our friends in the States have built up a chilled beef trade in twenty years from nothing to some thirty million worth per annum, to say nothing of the enormous value of the packing house products exported, amounting to two hundred million dollars. The farmers of this western country have for years realized the enormous advantage the inauguration of this industry would mean to them, and the time the thinking men of the country have always felt that to achieve this status amount of goods was most essential that the industry should be established on sound lines under government control and entirely free from the grip of trusts and monopolies.

The scheme submitted to the Federal minister of agriculture by the chilled meat committee seems to meet with the general approval of the west. It is felt that it contains the principles necessary for the building up of a large and enterprising export trade, and one which would be of enormous value, not only to the producer, but the country as a whole. The capital required to commence the business in the smallest possible way compatible with success is estimated at about two millions. This would provide for two small, complete plants, and five smaller works or feeders, placed in the principal stock producing centres of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

The Government is asked to guarantee one and a half millions of the capital in 4 per cent. bonds. For this assistance the Government is given control of the industry and the capital in such manner as to protect the producer for all time. In return for this co-operative principle is introduced, after receiving the highest price for his stock, the producer further participates in the maintenance and marketing of the finished product, to the extent of half the profit, after 4 per cent. has been paid on the guaranteed bonds, and the residual interest of 8 per cent. on the balance of the subordinated and unsecured stock. This would give the producer an interest in the concern, and a fair share in the development of the industry. Thus a tangible incentive would be given not only to produce, but to sell, and never has existed in this country.

The stimulus which could result, to either with the advantages and value of an organized dead meat export trade established on these lines, would be enormous and of a far-reaching nature, benefiting all who are engaged not only the ranchers and farmers but the whole community.

VARIOUS VIEWS

Leithridge Herald—Did anybody expect the recent census to show the City of Leithridge which had to pay more than $6,000 more than usual or coal says, "No," emphatically.

Montreal Witness—By establishing the degree of Bachelor of Agricultural Science, McGill university has given scholastic recognition to the oldest of all sciences. Agriculture is the basis of everything on which human and animal existence depends. Everyone who cultivates the ground has a mastery of the science gained by experience and almost wholly empirical. It is, however, of the fundamental principles of agriculture has prevailed in the past in Canada and the United States, the virgin fields have been cropped to sterility for producing grain, and the question of the growing area has passed by regular graduation from the east to the middle west, and from there to the Canadian west, and the same process is continued. In this process the fields that formerly produced grain are now devoted to the growing of hay. In some of the States, however, the fields that were the still more marked. In Virginia the larger part of the eastern half of the state, once devoted to garden producing corn, cotton and tobacco, are now devoted to the production of deciduous fruit. The state of New York has many abandoned fields, and the same process is taking place in the United States. Similar conditions exist throughout the Dominion, and the result is a loss of value of land and of how to restore its fertility were chief among the causes for this loss of value. According to Mr. J. H. Hill the general opinion is that the loss of value is even to the limit of the grain-bearing area once described as limitless.

meral union of the European powers. But when Judge Schwartz talks about the United States as the enemy of Europe, he falls into an error which is common with those who treat the United States as a foreign power. The United States is not a foreign power, it is a part of the world, and it is the duty of the European powers to treat it as such.

the fact is indisputable. In the historic election of 1890—which since even more incredible—the people were gravely misled, and if Newfoundland had been taken away from the Dominion, it would have been a great loss to the Dominion. The young men were drafted off to fight in the "desert" war, and the Dominion was left with a large number of men who were not trained for the work of the Dominion.
